9TH ARMY CRACKS NAZI LINE WEST OF RUHR

GUARDING the western approach to the bomb-shattered cathedral city of Cologne is the little river Erft, which straggles northward across the rolling plain to empty into the Rhine near Duesseldorf, and if you will watch what happens when the Allied advance hits the Erft I believe you will be able to solve the mystery of whether the Germans intend to make a stand west of the Rhine.

Nazi Field Marshal Von Rundstedt has issued a ringing order of the day, calling on his troops to fight to the last man in defense of the approaches to the great manufacturing center of the Ruhr—the heart of Hitler's war industries. The marshal says all will be lost if the Ruhr goes. That's a true bill, but the Ruhr is east of the Rhine and Rundstedt's order naturally doesn't disclose how he intends to make his defense.

It won't be long before we know—perhaps it will be too—for the American Ninth and First armies, driving forward in the center of the great battle, are near the Erft as this is written. That isn't much of a river, but it's the last natural defense of Cologne, and Rundstedt will fight there unless he intends to retreat to the east of the Rhine. If withdrawal is his scheme, he undoubtedly has moved some of his forces across already.

Should the Nazi commander perform the tremendously difficult and dangerous feat of crossing the Rhine in full retreat, he would have deprived the Allies of the decisive victory which they would achieve by annihilating his armies on the Cologne plain. Eisenhower would have to follow over the Rhine and finish the job there. Only time—and not speculation—will give us the answer. The great offensive goes well—far better than

Columbia Street P. T. A. Hears Talk By Barton

Capt. Robert Barton, commander of the Salvation Army post, discussed the organization's youth work at a meeting of the Columbia Street P. T. A. held Monday night at the building. Musical entertainment featured three numbers, "Come to the Fair," "The Sleigh," and "Danny Boy" by the Junior High choir, directed by Miss Doris Tetlow. Walter Regal accompanied the group.

Guests at the meeting were Supt. of Schools E. S. Kerr, Junior High Principal H. K. Smith and Chalmers Grove, Prospect P. T. A. president. Wilbur Hamilton, Jerry Layden and Oliver Metts were named as a committee to supervise installation of a light at the front of the Columbia building. The light has been purchased by the P. T. A. members. Refreshments were served by fifth grade mothers in charge of Mrs. John Buta.

A discussion program is planned for the March 25 session.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Guam, Feb. 27.—Carrier aircraft of Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher's forces heavily damaged two Japanese aircraft factories, destroyed or damaged 233 planes and sank five small enemy vessels in strikes at the Japanese capital and Hachijo Jima, 175 miles to the south, Sunday and Monday.

Faced by only light opposition, although flying under "extremely adverse" weather conditions, the attacking force lost nine planes and suffered slight damage to two of the fleet's lighter units, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced. Five of the pilots of the downed American planes were saved.

Nimitz gave no indication of the size of the air force making Sunday's raids although Japanese reports have varied from 600 to 1,600 planes.

Inflit Damage

Primary targets of the Tokyo strike were the Nakajima aircraft plants at Ota, 50 miles northwest of Tokyo, and Kaizumi, three miles away. The Ota plant has been 75 per cent destroyed as a result of this attack and B-29 raids, Nimitz reported. Fifteen per cent of the remainder was damaged. The Kaizumi factory was described as "heavily damaged."

A total of 158 enemy planes were destroyed, 37 shot from the air, and 75 damaged on the ground, as pilots hit at ground installations, hangars and airfields in the two-day strike. Five small enemy vessels were reported as sunk and 19 others sunk or damaged. Two trains were destroyed in the Tokyo area.

The two aircraft factories constitute an extremely important part of Japan's airplane industry. The damage suffered should be a severe blow to Japanese productive capacity.

Hachijo Jima is situated almost directly athwart the air route from the Marianas to the industrial area of Tokyo. Since Pearl Harbor, the Japanese have developed the island for aviation purposes.

Hachijo is an ideal lookout base for warning of impending Superfortress strikes and the Japanese are believed to have constructed radio and weather observation stations there. It is 575 miles north of two islands.

Admiral Raymond O. Spruance was in overall command of the Fifth fleet force making the attack while Admiral Mitscher headed the fast carrier force.

Town Hall Meeting Wednesday Evening

Salem's next Town Hall meeting, at 8 tomorrow night in the High school auditorium, will be addressed by Mrs. Walter Regal, correspondent for the North American Newspaper Alliance who has seen much action in the Pacific islands.

Wolfe will tell about his experiences with the fighting men in the Pacific. He has lived with the troops in fox holes, watched land, air and sea battles from the sky.

His talk is said to be packed with thrills and human interest, as are his stories in newspapers and magazines. He also is the author of several books, and in 1943 won the Pulitzer prize for his distinguished reporting.

REV. TAYLOR SPEAKS IN BAPTIST SERIES

"What I Think of the Waste Basket" and "Accentuate the Positive" are the subjects for tonight and tomorrow night, respectively, of Rev. Phil Taylor, leader of the Victory Crusade evangelistic services now in session at the Baptist church.

A member of a large Baptist family, in which there are five ordained ministers, Rev. Taylor is conducting services here this week and will continue through March 19, when he will tell the life story of his father, who at 75 years of age has completed 60 years of Baptist work.

Two brothers, Stanley and Robert, are ministers of Baptist churches in Kansas and California and another pair, a brother, Charles and a sister, Lauri, have been in evangelistic work for the past 30 years.

Rev. Taylor, a constructive type of evangelist, "has been featuring some 5,000 feet of technicolor travel films along with each evening's service."

Meeting Opens Salem's Drive For $32,300 Red Cross Fund

Workers in the Salem area set out this morning to raise $32,300 as Salem's share of the Red Cross War fund, following their organization meeting in the Memorial building last night.

Lt. Elliott Hansell Tells of Worst Trip In 50 Air Missions

15TH A. A. F. IN ITALY—First Lt. Elliott Hansell, 21-year old B-17 navigator, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hansell, 1587 E. State, Salem, Ohio, has successfully flown 50 combat missions on an AAF Flying Fortress of the 15th Air Force.

The one mission that I "sweated out," remarked Lt. Hansell, "was my first, which was to Belgrade, Yugoslavia, on Sept. 3, 1944. We were nearing our target when difficulties forced us to feather two of our engines. Unable to maintain altitude, we salvaged our bombs and headed for home alone."

"We kept losing altitude until we were down to about 11,000 feet, and still 15 minutes from the Adriatic. Then we ran into a barrage of flak. At that altitude we were as big as a house to those gunners, and they really poured it to us. They tracked us for about five minutes, putting about 200 holes in our plane, but just couldn't land that big one."

Awarded Purple Heart

"Safely out of the flak we headed for an emergency landing field."

Corp. Tom Moore Suffers Battle Wound Overseas

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Moore of 168 Park dr. have been notified that their son, Corp. Tom C. Moore, has been slightly wounded in action and has been taken to a hospital in Paris.

He has been serving with the First Army on the western front since December.

McCulloch, captain of the special gifts committee; Miss Hazel Linn, executive secretary of Salem chapter; and Albert Hanna, last year's campaign chairman.

Charles L. Carruthers of Akron, who returned recently from his assignment as Red Cross program director in Australia, entertained with a report of the work in that country and throughout the Pacific area.

Red Cross clubs established in all the large cities of Australia offered many comforts and entertainment for American soldiers, Carruthers explained. There the boys rushed to get good meals, to play games, write letters, dance, sleep, have their furlough papers taken care of, and to be directed to places where they could find other clean amusement.

On Job At Front

They paid 16 cents a meal—the Army insisted that they pay something—and for their lodging, but everything else was furnished without cost, Carruthers said. They were given candy, cigarettes, gum, etc. Red Cross workers accompanied the soldiers on the invasion of Leyte and were serving doughnuts and hot coffee on the beach before the army kitchens could be set up. And they are still there, serving with the troops.

Carruthers explained that the Red Cross workers could go only as far as the army could take them, and that the women workers went with the army nurses.

While all this service to the boys on the battle fronts is costing a great deal of money, Carruthers explained that the army audited all expenses and no money was being wasted.

Following his talk a Red Cross war film was shown, volunteers were given final instructions and received their campaign supplies.

Campaign headquarters have been established at the Ohio Edison office.

Sergt. Robert Boughton Is Awarded Bronze Star

Technical Sergt. Robert E. Boughton of Salem, has been awarded the Bronze Star medal for his work as a crew chief of a B-26 Marauder bomber with the 388th Bombardment group in France commanded by Col. Thomas G. Corbin of Fremont, N. C.

Sergt. Boughton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Boughton, live at 928 Morris st. He has been overseas more than 20 months with Corbin's "Crusader" group, which has won the Presidential Unit citation for its outstanding bombing record against the enemy in France, Belgium, Holland and Germany.

Tanks Cross Valley, Enter Konigshoven

PARIS, Feb. 27.—Truck-riding infantry of the U. S. Ninth army broke completely through German defenses just west of the Ruhr today in a 10-mile advance and tanks raced across the Rhine valley into Konigshoven, 15 miles southwest of Duesseldorf and a mile from the Erft river.

The Ninth army charge to Konigshoven passed through town after town and outflanked the Ruhr basin industrial center of Munchen Gladbach.

Other Ninth army men moved within two and a half miles of Munchen Gladbach and captured many villages on the approaches to the city.

American First army troops fought closer than 10 miles from the outskirts of Cologne after advancing more than a mile down the main road from Dueren beyond Berghausen.

Flame-throwing tanks of Lt. Gen. William H. (Texas Bill) Simpson's U. S. Ninth army crashed into Rheindahlen, 17 miles southwest of the Rhine city of Duesseldorf and 14 from Neuss.

Rheindahlen is five miles north of Erkelenz and within easy cannon shot of the first chimneys of the Ruhr war industries.

The swift pace of Gen. Eisenhower's drive indicated the Americans were standing watch on the Rhine well within a fortnight. Half the distance from the pulverized Roer river line to the mighty river has been covered in the first five days of the onslaught.

River To Pass FLOOD LEVEL

Rising Ohio Expected To Crest At 39 Feet At East Liverpool

(By Associated Press) CINCINNATI, Feb. 27.—A prediction that the Ohio river would top flood stages by three to six feet from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati between now and Friday came from U. S. River Forecaster George R. Marth.

Marth forecast these states (flood stages in parentheses): Portsmouth, Ohio (50 feet) 52 to 54 feet Thursday; Maysville, Ky. (50) 52 to 54 feet, late Thursday; Grant, Ky. (51) 52 to 54 feet late Friday; dam 39, Markland, Ind. (48) 46 to 50 feet Saturday.

The river here edged toward its 52 foot flood mark at one tenth of a foot hourly, and Marth said a 55 foot crest should occur Friday "unless there is an unexpectedly heavy volume of water from the upper district."

Evacuate Lowlands

Evacuations from lowland areas were the rule all along the upper stream, roads and highways were temporarily blocked, delaying traffic and in instances disrupting travel to and from war plants.

East Liverpool prepared for a crest Thursday of 39 feet, six feet above flood mark, at that level, approximately 350 homes would be affected and part of the business district in New Cumberland would be underwater.

Marletta braced for a stage of 40 feet, four feet above flood. U. S. Engineer Forester Farley reported a rise of two-tenths of a foot an hour.

Swollen by two days of rain, the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers rose rapidly at Pittsburgh where the Weather bureau forecast a crest tomorrow of 30 to 31 feet, five to six feet above flood.

West Virginia streams also teemed. Red Cross and other relief agencies stood by, evacuating at least one family of Isabella in Newport, Ky., just across the Ohio river.

The AAF convalescent hospital in nearby Fort Thomas, Ky., said its security police detail would be available for any emergency within this section.

More than 20 hours of rain at Portsmouth boomed tributaries of the Ohio and Scioto rivers, driving families from their homes, blocking highways and caused damage by covering farms with silt.

The stage of the Ohio was 41.6 feet at 8 p. m. Yesterday, state highways 140 and 141 were closed at Rarden and Henley, and 139 near the Scioto-Jackson county line were flooded and traffic blocked.

Families were forced from their homes near Otway when Scioto Brush creek hurtled from its banks.

A state highway department truck driven by Emmet Wickham, 56, of East Liverpool, was struck at 2 a. m. today by a car driven by Charles Anderson of Beale, Vernon, Pa., as both were proceeding north on Route 7, about three miles south of Rogers.

The truck moving slowly as it spread cinders on the icy pavement, was sidwiped as Anderson's car skidded as he attempted to pass.

Neither driver was injured and only slight damage resulted to either vehicle.

Gen. MacArthur Terms Manila Democracy's Citadel In East

BY JAMES HUTCHESON

MANILA, Feb. 27.—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, with a catch in his voice and tears in his eyes, today named the war-ravaged city of Manila as democracy's citadel in the east during impressive ceremonies at Malacanang palace marking re-establishment of the commonwealth government.

While the general spoke in solemn voice his soldiers, operating 70 miles southward, invaded another island to clear the shortest shipping lane between the United States and Manila.

MacArthur shook his head sharply when he described Japanese brutality. As he neared the end of his historic speech he fought for control of his quivering voice. It was a moment of supreme tragedy in the midst of Asia's most triumphant ceremony for reestablishment of democracy in the Orient.

As the ceremony ended MacArthur, a light smile on his face, walked briskly to Senora Osmena, wife of the Commonwealth president, embraced her with wide arms, and said "I am glad you are back home. The wife of the executive had been hounded unsuccessfully by the Japanese for more than three years."

Unceered By Filipinos Gen. MacArthur, surrounded by men who fought with him at Bataan and Corregidor, told wildly cheering Filipinos he was lifting military rule from liberated areas of their Commonwealth in favor of the constituted government of President Sergio Osmeña.

"Your country once again is at liberty to pursue its destiny to an honored position in the family of free nations," he said.

"Your capital city, severely punished though it be, has regained its rightful place as a symbol of democracy."

Manila was occupied unopposed by the Japanese Jan. 2, 1942.

Earlier today, Gen. MacArthur had disclosed in a communique that soldiers of Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving's 24th division landed Sunday on Verde island, in the 10 mile channel between Luzon and Mindoro islands, to secure the west end of a direct route through the heart of the archipelago. Less than a week ago, the east end was secured by invasions of Capul and Biri islands in San Bernardino Strait between Luzon and Samar.

MacArthur, acting "on behalf of my government," restored civil rule and acclaimed Manila again the capital three days after his soldiers successfully concluded a three-week battle in the city's streets during which the Japanese laid waste the business district and the south side.

President Osmeña, accepting the responsibilities, expressed the hope it might be possible for the Philippines to have complete independence this year. He denounced the "Japanese bandits" and called MacArthur's drive a "crusade."

SALEM MAN DIED IN SHIP SINKING

Sergt. Charles Taylor Was On Prison Ship Sunk By U. S. Airmen

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Taylor of the Benton rd. have received the tragic news from the War department that their son, Sergt. Charles R. Taylor was one of the American prisoners of war killed in a U. S. attack on a Jap ship convoy off the Philippines on Sept. 7.

The Salem man, a member of a B-29 bomber crew, was held at Darvaon prison camp by the Japanese for two and a half years.

He was among 750 Americans aboard a ship bound for Japan in a convoy which was sighted and attacked by Yank airmen. The unmarked ship was sunk with others of the convoy with a loss of all but only 84 men.

During the time the former Mullins employee was a prisoner, Sergt. Taylor's parents received three cards from the camp telling them he was alive and in the internment camp. They had no other word from him since his capture, until October when the War department reported him as missing in action.

Sergt. Taylor, who was employed at the Delray hotel in Los Angeles, Calif. after leaving Salem, enlisted in the Air Force in August, 1940, at Seattle, Wash. He trained at Fort Douglas, Utah, and was sent to Nichols field in the Philippines in August, 1941.

He was born in Salem Nov. 2, 1913, and attended Salem High school.

Besides his parents, he leaves two sisters, Mrs. Henry Kale of Berlin Center and Mrs. William Alton of Salem; and three brothers, James of Rochester, Pa. Jesse, at home, and Fred, in Florida.

Doughboys Unchecked
First army tanks and infantry smashed another mile down the main highway from Duren to Cologne through Blatzheim into Berghausen. They still were unchecked at last reports.

A ridge guarding the Ert river was less than three miles ahead of the assault spearheads of Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges. Unless the stunted Wehrmacht was able to hold the ridge, a break through to the Rhine could be expected quickly. Cologne lies almost entirely on the west bank, and it could be seen from 10 or 20 miles away.

Field Marshal Von Rundstedt threw parts of his 9th and 11th tank divisions into the outer ring of defenses guarding Cologne and Dusseldorf. Although some of these Panzer units have been engaged, there was no reported attempt to deliver a counterblow.

Canadians to the north advanced five miles, capturing the road center of Udem, and reached outer defenses of the Hochwald defense line guarding the northwest corner of the Ruhr, less than 15 miles away.

Thin Defenses Crumple
Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third army captured a ground over looking the Kyll river, moved to within a mile of strategic Bitburg and swept up nine towns in the Eifel along a 30-mile front which was pressed two miles deeper toward the middle Rhine and Coblenz.

All along the 200-mile assault front from Emmerich on the lower Rhine to the Bridgehead across the Saar river six miles east of Saarburg, the thinly spread German defenses were splitting at the seams.

Spoken for the Ninth and Third armies expressed belief that cleanest breakthroughs had been achieved. Prisoners captured in February alone passed 80,000; the total since D-day approached 930,000. Yet only a fraction of Gen. Eisenhower's 79 known divisions had been identified in the battle of annihilation west of the Rhine.

Bring your certificate of title when you apply for 1945 automobile licenses which go on sale Thursday, motorists were reminded today.

A. P. Morris, manager of the Columbus County Motor club, local registrar, said certificates or the old-type bills of sale were necessary to obtain 1945 plates.

Plates this year—only one to a car—will have blue digits on a white background, the reverse of 1944's color scheme, and will cost from $7.10 to $14 for passenger vehicles. They must be displayed after midnight March 31.

Morris reminded persons seeking licenses for cars owned by service personnel overseas that only the Columbus bureau handled such applications.

Wounded Third Time
SALINEVILLE, Feb. 27.—Pfc. Eugene Householder, infantryman and son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Householder of Salineville R.D. 4, has been hospitalized in France after being wounded for the third time. First wounded in Italy in August, he was transferred to France, where he was wounded a second time Oct. 16.

He was born in Salem Nov. 2, 1913, and attended Salem High school.

Besides his parents, he leaves two sisters, Mrs. Henry Kale of Berlin Center and Mrs. William Alton of Salem, and three brothers, James of Rochester, Pa. Jesse, at home, and Fred, in Florida.

Rural Tavern Closing
Is Watched By Sheriff

Sheriff George Hayes announced today, in response to many rural inquiries, that all county taverns will be forced to close at 12 midnight, in accordance with a request by the War Manpower commission.

Taverns around East Liverpool and Wellsville, where the time is Eastern War Time, will close at 12 their time, he said.

Gen. MacArthur Terms Manila Democracy's Citadel In East

BY JAMES HUTCHESON

MANILA, Feb. 27.—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, with a catch in his voice and tears in his eyes, today named the war-ravaged city of Manila as democracy's citadel in the east during impressive ceremonies at Malacanang palace marking re-establishment of the commonwealth government.

While the general spoke in solemn voice his soldiers, operating 70 miles southward, invaded another island to clear the shortest shipping lane between the United States and Manila.

MacArthur shook his head sharply when he described Japanese brutality. As he heard the end of his historic speech he fought for control of his quivering voice. It was a moment of supreme tragedy in the midst of Asia's most triumphant ceremony for reestablishment of democracy in the Orient.

As the ceremony ended MacArthur, a tight smile on his face, walked briskly to Senora Osmena, wife of the Commonwealth president, embraced her with wide arms and a friendly kiss on the cheek, and said "I am glad you are back home. The wife of the executive had been hounded unsuccessfully by the Japanese for more than three years."

Cheered By Filipinos
Gen. MacArthur, surrounded by men who fought with him at Batuan and Corregidor, told wildly cheering Filipinos he was lifting military rule from liberated areas of their Commonwealth in favor of the constituted government of President Sergio Osmena.

"Your country once again is at liberty to pursue its destiny to an honored position in the family of free nations," he said.

"Your capital city, severely punished though it be, has regained its rightful place as a symbol of democracy."

Manila was occupied unopposed by the Japanese Jan. 2, 1942.

Earlier today, Gen. MacArthur had disclosed in a communique that soldiers of Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving's 24th division landed Sunday on Verde island, in the 10-mile channel between Luzon and Mindoro islands, to secure the west end of a direct route through the heart of the archipelago. Less than a week ago, the east end was secured by invasions of Capul and Biri islands in San Bernardino strait between Luzon and Samar.

MacArthur, acting "on behalf of my government," restored civil rule and acclaimed Manila again the capital three days after his soldiers successfully conquered a three-week battle in the city's streets during which the Japanese had waste the business district and the south side.

President Osmena, accepting the responsibilities, expressed the hope it might be possible for the Philippines to have complete independence this year. He denounced the "Japanese bandits" and called MacArthur's drive a "crusade."

All The News From Home

It is easy to imagine what reports of the first few nights' experience with the midnight curfew are going to look like. In the small towns, where most of the residents go to bed before midnight anyway, there won't be anything to report. In the larger towns, there will be some cheating and conniving to get around the order. In the biggest towns, of course, there will be a widespread tendency to shrug off the whole thing as something designed for saps and suck-ups. The sophisticates of cafe society will find ways and means of keeping themselves busy long after midnight.

To this end, they have been issuing solemn warnings about the possible return of bootleggers and speakeasies as a result of the curfew order. What they mean is, that if they are thwarted they will see to it that bootleggers and speakeasies are invited to return to accommodate their desires. And since a large part of the nation takes its social manners ready-made from the cafe crowd, whether the manners fit or not, it's a good guess that the curfew order will become a headache for officials who try to enforce it.

This is not, perhaps, terribly important. In the nature of things, the curfew order itself can't be assigned more than secondary importance. Whatever it is supposed to do, and its purposes are vague and murky, it probably won't accomplish enough to make up for the headache it will cause. But that is beside the point. Americans have been asked to do a lot of things in the war that turned out to be of dubious value, and so have American soldiers. War is, after all, chiefly a challenge to a nation's ability to discipline its actions for a great national purpose—and some of the supposedly foolish things later turn out to be of prime importance.

Take selective service. There was a time when a lot of very critical people thought it was foolish to take all the boys away from home to go through the motions of learning about war with wooden cannons, instead of real ones. And there are still plenty of people who think gasoline rationing is more of a hardship than they should be asked to bear. The critics' judgment in these matters is no more infallible than the judgment of the bureaucrats, who are for the most part honest men interested in what some 10,000,000 Americans in uniform are going to say about the job done on the home front while they were busy on the battlefronts.

It is with that thought in mind—the Americans busy on the battlefronts—that we may wonder if all the news from home for the next few days will be as good as all the news from the battlefronts. All the news, that is, except the casualty lists.

How will the Marines on Iwo Jima feel as they come out of the grisliest stages of the blood bath they are enduring if they learn that back home a great horde of pampered patriots with nothing much on their minds but living the more abundant life decided against the wartime government on the issue of closing after-dark places of amusement at midnight?

How can we expect a 19-year-old fighting man crouching in the mud in western Europe to feel if he learns that the more mature members of the nation in whose behalf he is looking death in the eye 24 hours a day are gravely debating whether any power on earth, much less a mere government which can send millions of men and boys to war, can make them give up organized amusement at midnight as a war measure?

Or name your own favorite example. What will be his probable reaction to all the news from home, if all the news must include something about cutups and cuties who stomped their dainty feet and twittered, with plenty of moral support from the purveyors of libations, "Sooner should we be sent into exile than consent to this shameful infringement of our rights!" All the fighting signs point to the same thing right now—another surge of pride in American fighting power and of optimism about the possibility both wars may be over much sooner than expected. Great deeds are in the doing by some of the earth's finest young men. Some of the young men never will know again what is happening back home, but most of them are still going to be following the news.

The midnight curfew is just a little thing, perhaps even a silly thing, but one of the tell-tale little things, like a trainee's reaction to live ammunition while crawling over an obstacle course. If he can't hold himself down then, the chances are he's going to be a washout as a combat soldier.

The next month or two would be a fine time to prove that in one of the simple little tests of civilian worthiness in World War II the folks back home did a little better, instead of a little worse, than expected.

National Emergency Insurance

In its latest report, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis discusses the need for a special fund to be drawn on in emergencies and epidemics. Fortunately, the Foundation already has established such a fund for infantile paralysis, and it supplied about three-quarters of a million dollars in last summer's epidemic, second worst in national history.

The vast health project which has been organized for treatment and study of infantile paralysis is an incentive for duplicating the same kind of private effort in dealing with other diseases. While similar foundations might be more difficult to dramatize, there now exists proof that two of the worst scourges, infantile paralysis and tuberculosis, can be blocked by the support and interest of the public.

It is not beyond imagination that in time all the other scourges might be confronted with the concerted determination of ordinary citizens to fight them by cooperative efforts outside government. Such foundations would become in time a kind of national emergency insurance against the dread eventuality of disease.

Who Dares Speak of Sacrifice?

The ever-growing streams of wounded and disabled young Americans returning from the battlefronts will help to remind all of us that sacrifice is not a word to be used carelessly.

To the dead is reserved the right to mention sacrifice without reservation, and the dead cannot speak. Their right is relinquished to their loved ones. The wounded and maimed also may speak, but for the most part they are less conscious of sacrifice than of their own great gratitude for being alive.

The rest of us are silent in their presence, or should be. We have lost nothing, by comparison; rather we have gained the opportunity to show our awareness of the handicaps they have incurred in our behalf. This will become more evident as the war wears on. It is one post-war problem we must solve day by day while the war is in progress. For the men now coming back in ever greater numbers, the war is over and peace must begin now. They have earned it.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, February 28

THE auguries for this day show much opposition and conflict, with sudden and unforeseen events. Conditions arising call for keen insight and shrewd understanding with quick action lest there be regrets, entanglements and strange adventures. It will be best to meet this with astute, quiet and controlled emotions and not harsh, eccentric moves or wayward urges. Such precipitate unprofitable results, nervous and physical tensions and crises, of deep-rooted consequence. With discreet, prudent and well-directed tactics, results may produce some benefits.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may eventually enjoy a productive, progressive and lucrative year, if they will consistently manage surprising, menacing and hazardous situations with serious forethought, sound judgment and control action in strange, dramatic and unaccustomed circumstances. Unprecedented and baffling occurrences demand calm mental abilities and ingenuity and not unbalanced emotions and impulses. Defer change and making critical decisions until a more favorable time. Negotiate obstacles rather than try to crash through them, for lasting and gratifying returns. Safeguard health and property.

A child born on this day may be endowed with creative ability and skills but may be disposed to let its reckless impulses or emotions run away with better judgment.

He Who Gets Snubbed

General de Gaulle has been criticized considerably for his deliberate and deplorable snub of President Roosevelt, whom he refused to meet in North Africa. But somehow we feel a sneaking admiration for the testy, unglamorous general, bad manners and all.

Certainly General de Gaulle and the nation whose provisional government he heads were roundly snubbed by the Big Three, who undertook to make decisions vital to France at the Crimea conference without bothering to consult the French government.

France is a country of great history, proud tradition, courageous survival and hopeful future. Her recent misfortunes scarcely merit the paternal brush-off she got at Yalta, and General de Gaulle can scarcely be blamed for resenting it vigorously.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

The Excessive Drinker, A Community Problem

BY HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

UNDOUBTEDLY in this country there are millions of persons who use alcoholic beverages in moderation, with no harmful effects. But it has been estimated by Doctor David C. Wilson of Virginia that there are about 2,500,000 persons who drink to excess. Some of these persons, as a result of excessive drinking, have become serious problems to themselves and their families, and to the communities in which they live. Others have developed heart, kidney or liver disease which, of course, is damaging to their own health, even though they may not have become a problem to the communities in which they reside. Of course, these drinkers require treatment for the ailments which they have developed.

As a rule, those who drink to excess are made or less helpless people, who, in spite of the best of intentions, nevertheless fall back into their bad habits of drinking, no matter how many times they seem to be cured. They often have a weak degree of restraint, a lack of mental poise and stability, and, frequently, are selfish and conceited.

It is true that a number of drinkers have some underlying mental disease, and, of course, these persons should be treated by a psychiatrist.

A second group is made up of immature persons. They have never grown up, and have found that they can relieve tension and escape conflicts by the use of alcoholic beverages. They find drinking relaxing, and it is difficult for them to face the realities of life when they can find quick and easy relief by drinking.

A third group is made up of those who are definitely handicapped, who may have a low degree of intelligence, and who do not have their emotions under proper control.

Thus it will be seen that in treating the patient who drinks to excess, one of the first things that must be done is to study his personality completely in an effort to determine the cause of the difficulty, because the type of treatment utilized will depend upon the exact source of the habit.

Many of these persons do well in a hospital, for they need physical as well as mental treatment. Their general health must be improved and often, since they are lacking in vitamins, the various vitamin preparations must be administered in large quantities. Any physical defects present also should be discovered and eliminated. Then comes the real problem of building up the patient's self-confidence, so that he can learn to face the problems of the world without resorting to alcoholic beverage to escape them.

Movable Fireplace Seen At Exhibit In Chicago

CHICAGO — Have you been dreaming about a fireplace you can pick up and move from room to room in your home?

Whether you have or not, such a fireplace is now a reality, on view for recent buyers at the American Furniture Mart here.

Also displayed at the show were chairs of a type that can be adapted, in pairs, to make a piano bench in trios to serve as a love seat, and in four as a card table. These chairs, described as the "trickiest yet conceived," also can be set up in circular manner, and, presto! a sofa.

One of the main features of the show was styling, about 40 per cent of the furniture suites being in the modern and 18th Century designs. Officials of the market predicted that the modern style is destined to predominate in the post-war era, because of its favoritism with the youth now in the armed forces.

FOOD LABELS REVEALING

State and Federal food laws have been instrumental in making it possible for the public to know the contents of most packages of food now displayed in the food markets. However, many women are unfamiliar with the labels on the various foods they purchase. For instance, it is questionable as to how many women reading this article have read the enrichment label on the bread they buy every day. It is very important that every housewife becomes familiar with this label showing the amount of vitamins and minerals because all brands of bread are not the same. A comparison of enrichment labels on various brands of bread will reveal how much more nourishment Keystone Bread supplies than other brands.

Keystone Bread is enriched with extra vitamins and minerals to the very highest standards set by the U. S. Government. This enrichment is over 50% greater than the minimum requirement. Keystone Bread contains more Vitamin B1, more Vitamin B2, more Niacin, and more Iron than any other bread sold in the community—Adv.

WASHINGTON HOMES ARE NOT EVEN SAFE

WASHINGTON — The Red Cross reports that 5,235 Washingtonians were hospitalized after accidents in their homes in 1944; 142 of the cases were fatal.

The National Safety council says this ratio is about the national average and proves that the home is still one of the most dangerous places, rolling up three accidents for every mishap on the job.

Here is how some Washingtonians came to grief: A light-bulb exploded in a little boy's face when he spit on it; a woman cut her mouth trying to open a bottle of beer with her teeth; a man swallowed a lighted cigarette while sleeping; several were burned swallowing 10¢ cigarettes; a sleepwalker barged into an electric fan.

Only three jaws were dislocated—two while yawning, one when a sore throat was being painted.

"Ah! Now I Can Breathe Again!"

Wonderfully quick, a little Va-tro-nol on each nostril helps open nasal passages—makes breathing easier—when your head fills up with stuffy transient congestion! Va-tro-nol gives grand relief too, from stuffy, sneezy distresses, colds, flu, hay fever.

CORPSES AT INDIAN STONES

By PHILIP WYLIE

1943 by Author—Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX
Plum cleared a space on the table and spread out the evening paper. "We put the fox on it, and opened a Manila envelope. Sarah moved close to scrutinize the glossy prints of a man's hand—with teeth marks on it."

"We didn't blow any up to life size," Wes said. "No need. No fox. I did take an impression of the bite of the chef's pook—but it wasn't at all similar."

"I'll get some calipers," Aggie volunteered. He ran up the stairs. The trooper looked at Sarah. "What's he got—besides this? It's sticking out all over him!"

"I don't know."

"I hope it's something good!" Wes walked to the cold hearth and back. "I've run down leads on Bogarty till I hate the name. And there's no trace of the gold. Either Calder or Davis cleaned it out before they died, or else whoever took it has planted it somewhere. But not in a bank and not in a deposit box—I'll guarantee!"

Aggie returned with the calipers and the paraffin top of a jelly glass. He thrust the paraffin between the jaws of the dead fox, pushed them together, and set the impression thus made beside the photograph. "Crude," he said as he worked, "but adequate." He bent over. "They look identical. We'll take a half dozen measurements and compare their ratios."

"They went to work on the measurements. Aggie took them—first from the paraffin and then from the photograph. Sarah wrote them down. Wes set them up as ratios. After fifteen minutes he said, 'That ought to do,' and calculated."

"Checks!" he soon reported. "I'd buy the idea that this fox bit Calder before he died—and after he walked out of this room. Proving that Calder saw Bogarty."

"Proving nothing of the sort," Aggie answered. "Proving—merely—that Calder saw Bogarty's fox. Or maybe—vice versa, only. We have piled up a mountain of information and we have done only a hint of thinking."

"You haven't been watching me awake nights!" Wes said.

"I mean—real thinking. Speculation. Pushing out in the blue. For example, have you ever thought that Hank Bogarty may never have reached Indian Stones?"

"That's impossible!"

"Aggie grinned. 'Is it? Prove it! We know that his car got as far as Upper Lake—and went in it. We know that his fox got loose—and we now have the fox. We know his fox bit Calder—and since foxes—ever reasonably tame ones—don't just rush up and bite men, we can assume this fox, at the time of the biting, was on a leash, or in a car, or something of that sort. But does that demonstrate Hank Bogarty was on the other end of the leash or at the wheel of the car? Not positively. We know that Hank Bogarty's knife pinned his calling card to Sarah's door—or at least I think it was the same knife. We know Bogarty's knife was found in George Davis's heart—because you sent the knife out to Seattle and the man who made it identified it. We know the calling card was Hank's—because you sent that out. We know Hank was in Albany—because the clerk at the telephone office identified him from a photograph made in Seattle."

"Good Lord!" exclaimed the trooper.

Aggie chuckled. "We know all that—but not any of it proves Hank was here. Let us say, purely for argument, that somebody knew he was coming and caught up with him in Albany. Let us say this person called Hank, set him in a barrel of cement and threw him in the Hudson—or otherwise effectively disposed of the body. This person then drove to Indian Stones with the car, the fox, the knife, the calling cards—and anything else that may yet turn up. The car—"

"Wes slapped his knee. 'Sure! The car is driven into the lake! A cinch! The card is stuck to Sarah's door—for her to find. But you put the knife on the rail. Calder picks it up—the murderer bangs Calder into the head—because being seen with that fox would give him away! He gets back Hank's knife from Calder's person! The murderer lets the fox go—or it escapes. From there on—the murderer only has to go on making it look as if Bogarty were around to keep me, and the newspapers, and everybody, looking for Hank—instead of somebody else! The trooper's excitement faded. 'Except for one thing.'"

"Exactly," said Aggie. Sarah looked blank. "Exactly what?"

"Wes glanced at Aggie. 'How does this murderer pass through a locked and bolted door—or a window the size of a book—to put that knife in Dr. Davis? Or—did Davis kill himself—after all? Had he stolen the money in the cellar—and did he come across Hank's knife somehow—and use it?'"

"No," Sarah said. "George never did!"

"Then I wish," Wes grunted, "you could explain what did happen in that darkroom!"

"I can," Aggie answered. "It was simple. Finding out—was what put me onto the theory of blue-sky thinking." Nobody interrupted him as he described, meticulously, the two trees he had seen at the summerhouse—the tree with the scars and the tree with the knothole. "In other words," he said, "if you think of the knothole as the little window—and the big tree as Davis—you get the picture. Somebody threw that knife into Davis."

Sarah gasped. "I thought of that long ago. But I didn't believe you could throw a knife hard enough—and, besides—George had it in his hand."

"Somebody," Aggie answered, "was cut there at the summerhouse—throwing a knife through that knothole and into the tree beyond it—hard enough to dig the point into the wood well up on the blade! The slits were an inch wide! That was a heavy knife. You could throw it as hard as a baseball."

"But—George was holding it!" she protested.

Aggie nodded. "Yeah. Being struck—in the heart—like that—might produce instant collapse in most people. But not in this case. Look at the scene: Dr. Davis, locked in his darkroom, working on those prints he'd made of the dead-fall. Up in the tree sits the man we don't know. Woman—even. Why not?"

"Tree?" she asked.

"There's a big maple outside the barn. The murderer is in it—looking at George. Maybe he is going to kill him because he is afraid of what those films may show. I thought that the murderer might come back for something in that darkroom. And that maybe Danielle and I had beaten him to it." Aggie looked patronizingly at the trooper's nod of commendation. "I can think of sometimes. Only you didn't find a thing that was useful in any of the negatives—did you, Wes?"

"Nothing very useful. No."

Aggie hesitated—and went on. "Objection! The murderer makes a deliberate noise. George turns and peers at the window. The knife is thrown. George clasps it and tries to withdraw it—for one, fearful instant. Then he topples."

"I guess," Wes said, "you've got it."

"Guess! Just think of this: The maple tree is at an angle from the barn. The phone wires run through it—low down in the branches—to the first pole. If you look, you'll find the limb from which the murderer dived. Maybe even some old scratches. And you'll find that he had to lean in order to throw. You'll find that even if he used the best possible limb after a throw, a person might lose his balance."

"Wes finished for him. 'And break the phone wires! Why didn't I think an accident might have brought those wires down!'"

"Because," Aggie answered, "when telephone wires are severed, you habitually think it was done to cut off telephones—and hence, on purpose."

"So," Wes went on, "if we'd had sense to have stripped everybody at Indian Stones and looked for two parallel bruises—or welts—those wires should have made beauties—we'd have found whoever threw the knife!"

"Unless, of course," Aggie remarked calmly, "the person who threw it does not belong to Indian Stones."

ULITHI, Western Carolines—The movie reached the scene where a man said to one of the beautiful, dumb blondes:

Most of the invaders' equipment was lost. "The invasion beach... is a scene of indescribable wreckage—all of it ours," wrote a Marine Corps combat correspondent. Army and Navy Both Needing Steady Flow Of Blood Plasma

(By International News Service)

ST. LOUIS — American public opinion regarding the progress of the war has one very accurate gauge—perhaps the most unique of all opinion polls—the American Red Cross blood donor program.

To say that the Red Cross blood donor program reflects the pulse of the nation is more than a pun, it's a literality, according to H. P. Keisker, manager of the American Red Cross midwestern area. Every wave of optimism or pessimism has an immediate effect on the number of donations at the 31 blood donor centers in the nation, and today more than ever this is having its effect on the supply of blood collected for use by the armed forces, Keisker reported.

A steady, even flow of whole blood and blood plasma is the emphatic request of the army and navy to the Red Cross and, paradoxically, optimism about war gains is the most serious disruption of this program. Basil O'Connor, national chairman of the American Red Cross, has stated. Still a second problem is the fact that not every section of the country can participate in the program, and many false concepts arise from that, Keisker remarked.

Latest Development

Newest development in the Red Cross program of supplying blood to the battle fronts is the inauguration of air borne whole blood shipments to the Pacific war zone which started recently. To serve emergency needs for whole blood, the American Red Cross blood donor centers in San Francisco, Oakland and Los Angeles have undertaken to supply 300 pints of blood daily to be flown by the Naval Air Transport Service from San Francisco to Pearl Harbor and thence to the island bases bordering the fighting fronts.

Special portable, thermostatically controlled, mechanical refrigerators are used for what Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, surgeon general of the Navy, terms "a new milestone in medical history." Only donors with "O" type blood can be used in this phase of the program. Red Cross blood donor officials report, since this type can be given to all casualties regardless of their own blood groups.

Important Milestone

Whole blood flights from the east coast to the European battle theater have already been operating successfully for some months. The system has been acclaimed as one of the most important advances in the care of wounded since the inauguration of the Red Cross blood collection program in February, 1941.

Another milestone in the blood donor program was recently marked by the completion of the serum albumin program after operating successfully for the Navy during the past two and one-half years.

Serum albumin is a concentrated liquid form of blood plasma. It requires approximately three times as much whole blood per unit as does dried blood plasma and is concentrated in a container less than one-fourth the size of the standard plasma unit. Because of the concentrated form and the ease of transporting serum albumin, the Navy urgently requested large quantities of this precious fluid in the days following Pearl Harbor.

The American Red Cross is continuing doggedly in its determination to assure 80-90,000 pints of blood regularly each week for shipment to the far corners of the world.

In one of the most highly technical volunteer activities of its history, the Red Cross has accepted responsibility for fulfilling all requests from the fighting services for blood—which this year totaled 5,000,000 pints. It has, at the same time, been the subject of queries by persons living in localities outside of the technical range of the program not familiar with the necessary limitations.

Meanwhile, the miracle of blood plasma and blood transfusion is repeated hundreds of times daily on every battlefield regardless of home front public opinion fluctuations. To the men in foxholes, the story is a simple one. "Where there is blood plasma, men live. Where there is no blood plasma, men die. It is literally everywhere—on

Manila Hemp To Find Its Way To America Again From Philippines

NEW YORK—Most war scarce of all vital commodities, abaca, known commonly as manila hemp, may soon be off the short supply list. As MacArthur's men move forward in the Philippines they are freeing lands on which this critical fiber is grown and with them are experts who are arranging for the stripping and shipping of the commodity.

Used for a myriad of marine tasks, the fiber has been scarce since the Japs seized the Philippines. Over 90 per cent of all abaca was grown in the islands before the war. Nearly all the manila hemp imported into the United States goes into the manufacture of ropes and cables for ships. It is particularly well suited for this use, having a high degree of resistance to sea water, durability and tenacity.

So critical did the shortage of the cordage fiber become after the fall of Luzon that substitutes, generally inferior to the Philippine product, had to be used on naval and merchant ships. Seventeen plants producing inefficient European-type hemp were constructed by the government in the midwest. These products, however, proved unsatisfactory for marine cordage use.

Experiment Succeeds

In 1942 experimental plantations of abaca were started by the United Fruit Company in Central America. Previous experimentation in India, the Dutch East Indies, the Dutch East Indies and the Malay States had failed. In Central America, much to the surprise of cordage experts, however, the plant flourished and grew. Abaca planting, was kept to a small scale in Latin America, because of the greater cost of the fiber there compared with that of the Philippine product. With the fall of Mindanao, largest producing island, early in 1942, military authorities requested in the United Fruit Company to begin extensive plantings in Panama, Costa Rica, Honduras and Guatemala. This year's crop is expected to amount to 65,000,000 pounds, approximately two-thirds the normal imports from the Philippines and because planting was done from suckers, rather than seeds, the abaca plant is very similar to the banana plant found throughout Central America.

When Japan took the Philippines she knew she was cutting off our supply of the vital cordage fiber. She had planned for this even before Pearl Harbor. More than half of Mindanao's population was Japanese and nearly all the plantations were in Jap hands. The Japs have broadcast claims that abaca fields have in great part been replanted with other crops, Japan's supply of cordage fiber being sufficient. The extent

By PHILIP WYLIE

1943 by Author—Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

Plum cleared a space on the table and spread out the evening paper. "We put the fox on it, and opened a Manila envelope. Sarah moved close to scrutinize the glossy prints of a man's hand—with teeth marks on it."

"We didn't blow any up to life size," Wes said. "No need. No fox. I did take an impression of the bite of the chef's pouch—but it wasn't at all similar."

"I'll get some calipers," Aggie volunteered. He ran up the stairs. The trooper looked at Sarah. "What's he got—besides this? It's looking out all over him!"

"I don't know," Aggie answered. "I hope it's something good!"

Wes walked to the cold hearth and back. "I've run down leads on Bogarty till I hate the name. And there's no trace of the gold. Either Calder or Davis cleaned it out before they died, or else whoever took it has planted it somewhere. But not in a bank and not in a deposit box—I'll guarantee!"

Aggie returned with the calipers and the paraffin top of a jelly glass. He thrust the paraffin between the jaws of the dead fox, pushed them together, and set the impression thus made beside the photograph.

"Crude," he said as he worked. "but adequate." He bent over. "They look identical. We'll take a half dozen measurements and compare their ratios."

They went to work on the measurements. Aggie took them—first from the paraffin and then from the photograph. Sarah wrote them down. Wes set them up as ratios. After fifteen minutes he said, "That ought to do," and calculated.

"Checks!" he soon reported. "I'd buy the idea that this fox bit Calder before he died—and after he walked out of this room. Proving that Calder saw Bogarty."

"Proving nothing of the sort," Aggie answered. "Proving—merely—that Calder saw Bogarty's fox. Or maybe—vice versa, only. We have piled up a mountain of information and we have done only a bit of thinking."

"You haven't been watching me awake nights!" Wes said. "I mean—real thinking. Speculation. Pushing out in the blue. For example, have you ever thought that Hank Bogarty may never have reached Indian Stones?"

"That's impossible!" Aggie grinned. "Is it? Prove it!"

We know that his car got as far as Upper Lake—and went in it. We know that his fox got loose—and we now have the fox. We know his fox bit Calder—and since foxes—even reasonably tame ones—don't just rush up and bite men, we can assume this fox, at the time of the thing, was on a leash, or in a car, or something of that sort. But does that demonstrate Hank Bogarty was on the other end of the leash or at the wheel of the car? Not positively. We know that Hank Bogarty's knife pinned his calling card to Sarah's door—or at least—I think it was the same knife. We know Bogarty's knife was found in George Davis's hand—because you sent the knife out to Seattle and the man who made it identified it. We know the calling card was Hank's—because you sent that out. We know Hank was in Albany—because the clerk at the telephone office identified him from a photograph made in Seattle."

"Good Lord!" exclaimed the trooper.

Aggie chuckled. "We know all that—but not any of it proves Hank was here. Let us say purely for argument, that somebody knew he was coming and caught up with him in Albany. Let us say this person killed Hank, set him in a barrel of cement and threw him in the Hudson—or otherwise effectively disposed of the body. This person then drove to Indian Stones with the car, the fox, the knife, the calling card—and anything else that may yet turn up. The car—"

"Wes slipped his knee. 'Sure! The car is driven into the lake! A cinch! The card is stuck to Sarah's door—for her to find. But you put the knife on the rail. Calder picks it up, the murderer is around with the fox on a leash—Calder runs into them—the murderer bangs Calder one on the head—because being seen with that fox would give him away! From there on—the murderer only has to go on making it look as if Bogarty were around to keep me, and the newspapers, and everybody, looking for Hank—instead of somebody else! The trooper's excitement faded. 'Except for one thing.'"

"Exactly," said Aggie.

Sarah looked blank. "Exactly what?"

Wes glanced at Aggie. "How does this murderer pass through a locked and bolted door—or a window the size of a book—to put that knife in Dr. Davis' Or—did Davis kill himself—after all? Had he stolen the money in the cellar—and did he come across Hank's knife somehow—and use it?"

"I can think—sometimes. Only you didn't find a thing that was useful in any of the negatives—did you, Wes?"

"Nothing very useful. No."

Aggie hesitated—and went on. "Okay. The murderer makes a deliberate noise. George turns and peers at the window. The knife is thrown. George claps it and tries to withdraw it—for one, fearful instant. Then he topples."

"I guess," Wes said, "you've got it."

"Guess! Just think of this: The maple tree is at an angle from the barn. The phone wires run through it—low down in the branches—to the first pole. If you look, you'll find the limb from which the murderer threw. Maybe even some old scratches. And you'll find that he had to lean in order to throw. You'll find that even if he used the best possible limb, after a throw, a person might lose his balance."

To the men in foxholes, the story is a simple one: "Where there is blood plasma, men live. Where there is no blood plasma, men die. It is literally everywhere—on bombers, aboard ships, on the backs of pack mules, in motor caravans—and the fighting progress of a combat unit can frequently be traced by the trail of empty blood plasma cans behind it.

One sailor summed it up neatly in a letter home. Kelsker quoted: "At every battle station, you'll find it waiting. Mother, even if you can give only a drop, it can be added to other drops and may mean the difference between life and death for someone's son, husband or sweetheart."

Medieval entertainers, having no newspaper in which to advertise themselves, used a "cri" or herald accompanied by a parade.

Bond Bread Makes Marvelous Toast!

It's tender, golden brown all over—marvelous with jam or spreads if you're short of butter

Miss Mounts Is Bride Of Corp. Terry

A lovely candlelight ceremony at 8 p. m. yesterday in the Presbyterian church united in marriage Miss Jo Adele Mounts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Mounts of W. Pershing st. and Corp. John K. Terry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Terry of Stockton, Calif.

Dr. R. D. Walter officiated at the single ring ceremony before the altar, banked with palms and ferns and lighted by white tapers in two 14-branch candelabra.

Preceding the ceremony a program of organ music was presented by Miss Anna Cook, whose numbers included "Ave Maria," "Thine Alone" (Herbert) and "Evening Star" from "Tannhauser" (Wagner). Miss Cook played the accompaniment for Mrs. Vesta King who sang "The Kashmiri Love Song" (Amy Woodford-Finden) and "I Love Thee" (Grieg). The traditional "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin" (Wagner) and Mendelssohn "Wedding March" were played for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin gown with short train, fashioned with sweetheart neckline and leg o' mutton sleeves. The bodice of the dress was ornamented with lace medallions set in net and embroidered with seed pearls. Her fingertip veil was arranged in a Juliet cap of Irish lace. She carried an ivory prayerbook with an orchid, showered with sprigs of budding tied in white satin ribbons.

Miss Eleanor Stewart as maid of honor wore a colonial style gown of rose corded taffeta, with sweetheart neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. Her colonial bouquet of orchid pansies was centered with yellow rosebuds and was tied with yellow ribbons. She wore yellow roses in her hair. She also wore an opal necklace, a gift of the bride.

William A. Weber attended Corp. Terry as best man.

Others were William Weber, Jr., and Dale Weizenacker of Sebring, cousins of the bride.

The bride's mother wore a black wool and velvet street dress and corsage of gardenias. Mrs. William Weber, aunt of the bride, wore a black rock and gardenia corsage.

Reception Is Held
Following the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home for members of the wedding party and 25 friends and relatives. Buffet refreshments were served at a beautifully decorated table. A linen and Madeira cloth covered the table which was centered with a three-tier wedding cake topped with miniature soldier and bride and lighted by white tapers.

Mrs. Lester Lehman, Mrs. John W. Salem and Miss Margaret Mounts of Youngstown, aunt of the bride, assisted at the reception.

Mrs. Terry wore a white silk jersey dinner gown with brocade bodice for the reception.

The couple will leave tonight for Philadelphia. The groom will go to Drew field at Tampa, Fla., for crew assignment.

Guests attended from Beaver Falls, Youngstown and Sebring. The bride, a graduate of Salem High school in 1941, attended Miami University and graduated from a cosmetology school in Youngstown. She is employed in the payroll office of the Mullins Corp.

Corp. Terry, who recently received his wings as an aerial gunner from the Army Air Corps school at Kingman, Ariz., is a graduate of the Carthage, Mo., High school. He studied medicine for three years at the University of Kansas before going into the service.

$40,000 In Bank Left By 'Penniless' Sisters

LONDON.—The old three-story house on Rosehill road, like a Victorian vignette, hadn't changed a bit since its two occupants came to live in it 64 years ago.

They were Caroline and Matilda Newton, spinster sisters, who, untouched by the whirlwinds of fashions and customs, still wore the black dresses that swept the ground and buttoned up to the neck.

They lived quietly and with great austerity like many others of their age whose existences are often limited by pitifully small incomes.

Last July a flying bomb struck the old house, and Caroline, 83, and Matilda, 85, were both killed.

A kindly neighbor, thinking the aged sisters had died penniless, spent $130 on their funeral.

But when rescue workers set to work on the debris they found papers showing the spinster sisters had over $40,000 in the bank in bonds from the last war.

Miss Mounts Is Bride Of Corp. Terry

A lovely candlelight ceremony at 8 p. m. yesterday in the Presbyterian church united in marriage Miss Jo Adele Mounts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Mounts of W. Pershing st. and Corp. John K. Terry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Terry of Stockton, Calif.

Dr. R. D. Walter officiated at the single ring ceremony before the altar, flanked with palms and ferns and lighted by white tapers in two 14-branched candelabra.

Preceding the ceremony a program of organ music was presented by Miss Anna Cook, whose numbers included "Ave Maria," "Thine Alone" (Herbert) and "Evening Star" from "Tannhauser" (Wagner). Miss Cook played the accompaniment for Mrs. Vesta King who sang "The Kashmiri Love Song" (Amy Woodford-Finden) and "I Love Thee" (Grieg). The traditional "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin" (Wagner) and Mendelssohn "Wedding March" were played for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin gown with short train, fashioned with sweetheart neckline and leg of mutton sleeves. The bodice of the dress was ornamented with lace medallions set in net and embroidered with seed pearls. Her fingertip veil was arranged in a Juliet cap of Irish lace. She carried an ivory prayerbook with an orchid, showered with sprigs of budding in white satin ribbons.

Miss Eleanor Stewart as maid of honor wore a colonial style gown of rose corded taffeta, with sweetheart neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. Her colonial bouquet of orchid panicles was centered with yellow rosebuds and was tied with yellow ribbons. She wore yellow roses in her hair. She also wore an opal necklace, a gift of the bride.

William A. Weber attended Corp. Terry as best man.

Ushers were William Weber, Jr., and Dale Weizenacker of Sebring, cousins of the bride. The bride's mother wore a black wool and velvet street dress and corsage of gardenias. Mrs. William Weber, aunt of the bride, wore a black brook and gardenia corsage.

Reception Is Held

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home for members of the wedding party and 25 friends and relatives. Buffet refreshments were served at a beautifully decorated table. A linen and Madeira cloth covered the table which was centered with a three-tier wedding cake topped with miniature soldier and bride and lighted by white tapers.

Mrs. Lester Lehman, Mrs. John Weber of Salem and Miss Margaret Mounts of Youngstown, aunt of the bride, assisted at the reception. Mrs. Terry wore a white silk jersey dinner gown with brocade bodice for the reception.

The couple will leave tonight for Philadelphia. The groom will go to Drew field at Tampa, Fla., for crew assignment.

Guests attended from Beaver Falls, Youngstown and Sebring. The bride, a graduate of Salem High school in 1941, attended Miami University and graduated from comptometer school in Youngstown. She is employed in the payroll office of the Mullins Corp.

Corp. Terry, who recently received his wings as an aerial gunner from the Army Air Corps school at Kingman, Ariz., is a graduate of the University of Kansas before going into the service.

Cub Scouts Praised For Work Aiding Veterans

A project to provide games and puzzles for the entertainment of wounded servicemen in California hospitals, initiated and carried out by the members of Cub Scout Den 1, Pack 5, has met with great success.

Hours of work went into a recent shipment of puzzles and games and the labor by Salem youths has been rewarded by a letter from Dr. Nina Ellen Gird of Bonsall, Calif., who is in charge of the distribution of the gifts.

She told Mrs. J. E. Ference, head of the group here, in a recent letter that the gifts were more than welcome and were doing wonders in aiding the recuperation of the wounded men. She also said that any further contributions of this sort, as well as cards and other games, are still needed in large quantities there. Gifts can be addressed to Dr. Gird at Bonsall, Calif.

He previously had received the Distinguished Unit badge which was awarded to members of his battalion for extraordinary heroism during the Cherbourg offensive.

$40,000 In Bank Left By 'Penniless' Sisters

LONDON.—The old three-story house on Rosehill road, like a Victorian vignette, hadn't changed a bit since its two occupants came to live in it 64 years ago.

They were Caroline and Matilda Newton, spinster sisters, who, untouched by the whirlwinds of fashions and customs, still wore the black dresses that swept the ground and buttoned up to the neck.

They lived quietly and with great austerity like many others of their age whose existences are often limited by pitifully small incomes.

Last July a flying bomb struck the old house, and Caroline, 85, and Matilda, 85, were both killed.

A kindly neighbor, thinking the aged sisters had died penniless, spent $130 on their funeral.

But when rescue workers set to work on the debris they found papers showing the spinster sisters had over $40,000 in the bank in bonds from the last war.

PENICILLIN SPRAY FOR LUNGS STUDIED

New York Scientist Perfects Method of Treating Infections

COLD SPRING HARBOR, N. Y. — "Are you all right?" The woman's voice over the telephone was heard.

On the answer to her question hung the fate of a penicillin experiment which might affect all mankind.

But her concern was for a young colleague, who alone at night in a deserted laboratory was self-strapped into an oxygen-mask, pumping penicillin for the first time into human lungs to put his experiment to the crucial test. He was 31-year-old Vernon Bryson, research scientist of the Long Island Biological Laboratory, who one night last June pulled a successful experiment from his test tubes which may chalk up another triumph for the wonder drug.

Proof of its great promise is that his method for inhaling penicillin is in experimental use in the Huntington Long Island hospital and in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York's Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center. Promising to be a more effective cure for pulmonary diseases, the new method of administering the yellow magic is to have patients drag it into their lungs in a mist of fine particles. This gets higher doses more directly to infected lung areas.

COLLEAGUES HELP
In developing the method, Bryson had the help of two colleagues. One, whose telephone call on that eventful summer night climaxed a six month's experiment is Eva Sansome, British mycologist of the neighboring Carnegie Institute of Genetics. The other is Sidney Laskin, a fellow staff member of Bryson's at the Long Island Biological Laboratory, where the two young men are engaged in wartime physiological research of a confidential nature.

"If we hadn't hit upon the method of harnessing the new penicillin to an existing technique of inhalational therapy, someone else would have," says Bryson, Ph.D. son of Columbia University's famed Dr. Lyman Bryson, a young man who has been at home in a science lab since the test tubes at San Diego (Cal.) High first caught his fancy.

EXPLAINS FORMULA
Although painfully modest on the subject of his accomplishment, Bryson, who is youthful looking, dark-eyed and diffident, did explain in the manner of a science teacher explaining a simple formula the big problem which he and his two colleagues were up against.

"That," he said, "after ushering me into his evergreen-framed window overlooking Long Island Sound, 'was to see if penicillin could be made into a mist and inhaled without destroying the potency of the drug.'"

While Dr. Bryson explained how the penicillin mist was tested out on mice and rabbits to prove that it would penetrate into the lungs, his four stair-step-sized children romped back and forth from the chintz-bright living room where their mother talked to the kitchen where their lovely blonde mother kept busy cooking their dinner.

"The mice," Bryson said, "were marched into glass testing chambers and exposed to a penicillin mist. Later, when their lung lobes were ground up, penicillin was found to be present." This was the evidence he and his colleagues had set out to get. Additional proof obtained was penicillin recovered in the urine of experimental rabbits.

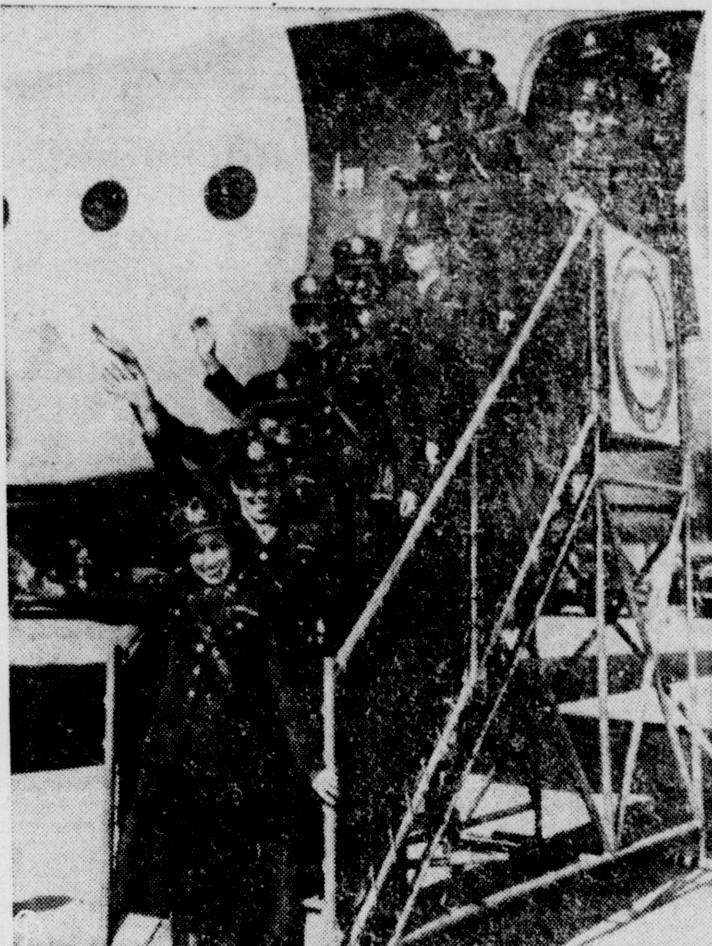

The new treatment, he explained, is simply applied with a nebulizer—first cousin to an atomizer. Placed directly in the patient's mouth, the penicillin mist is drawn by slow intakes of breath into the lungs while clocked seconds tick.

TREATMENTS SUCCED
The man who helped to develop the method insists that the advantage of it over penicillin injected into muscles or veins can be evaluated only after the medical evidence is collected.

But that evidence is piling up. Although not a word could be dragged out of Bryson about these clinical results, it is known that the first patient treated—a discharged Marine whose lung disease of long standing was affecting his brain—is recovering from a lung operation which the new treatment made possible. Fifty per cent improvement is claimed in the case of a woman suffering from chronic bronchitis—characterized by coughed up sputum in vast amounts and at frequent intervals.

Glacier Priest Hits Policies Of Soviets And U.S. Lend-Lease

By LYLE L. MARINER

DENVER—Father Bernard J. Hubbard, world famed as the 'Glacier Priest' of Alaska, who is touring the United States to sell his homeland as the new frontier of opportunity, paused in his campaign today for a critical look at his Russian neighbors across the Bering Straits.

Father Hubbard was specific in his criticism of a lend-lease policy which "works only one way" and "forces our airmen to fly 1,600 miles from Alaska to bomb Japanese installations which could be hit from Russian possessions only 28 miles away."

He pointed out that Russian-Japanese fighting treaties "provide Japan with weather stations which are costing American lives," and added "if the United States is to do the fighting and financing of the world's wars then it should also have cooperation on an equal basis from its allies."

He cited the recent episode in Iran where Stalin objected to American soldiers appearing in the Russian-held sector, and described the incident as part of "the Communist policy which is laying the foundation for control of all countries bordering the U.S.S.R." and "reshaping the same old game of power-politics over which the war is being fought."

Father Hubbard also criticized the failure of Russian delegates to attend the world-wide aviation conference held in Chicago.

Acted Like Child, Claim
"Stalin objected to the attendance of Spain and Switzerland at the conference, and because they were not excluded, like a child who can't have his way on every point, he wouldn't play," he declared.

In the picture of Alaska as a round-the-world air route, the Alaskan priest said the idea of using the Aleutians as "stepping stones" to Japan and Russia was one of the worst misconceptions being mouthed.

"Weather in the Aleutians is so bad and unpredictable they never can be used for anything, but the north route makes possible flights to Asia and Europe where planes could never be out of sight of land for more than 15 minutes," he explained.

Turning to the domestic aspects of recent Alaskan developments, Father Hubbard charged politics played a large part in the Canol oil project in Canada. "There is the navy reserve lands in Alaska covering 100,000 square miles, filled with oil which can be scooped from the surface in buckets, awaiting development. It is close to shipping, and temperatures don't get so low the oil must be heated and forced from source to outlet as does the Canol undertaking."

Lau's Alcan Highway
Father Hubbard said the Alcan highway "is not all waste is so much of war-time projects. Even now civilian traffic is flowing over the highway and in the future it will become a most-important road of North America."

103 MILLION PWA PLAN FOR ILLINOIS

State To Benefit From Program On Postwar Planning

CHICAGO—Illinois will benefit from a $103,554,647 post-war public planning works program set up by the Illinois Postwar Planning Commission here recently.

The program includes construction of buildings and other permanent improvements in the state university and colleges, state hospitals and penal institutions, government buildings at Springfield and the acquisition of a state office building in Chicago.

Chairman Anderson Pace said construction would be started as soon as Gov. Dwight H. Green and the state assembly approve the program and men and materials are available. The projects are expected to help "furnish employment for many men released from service or war production."

Separate Program
The commission emphasized the public works project is independent of the state highway program and other projects which will draw $200,000,000 from specially reserved funds.

Under the program an advance of $10,000,000 would be made to counties, municipalities and school districts who would match the funds to make local postwar improvements.

Veterans' hospitals and recreation facilities would receive $7,988,000; tuberculosis hospitals, $3,000,000; and the armory board, $9,155,405, to carry out its plans to set up 14 additional armories for veterans organizations.

One-fourth of the entire project is slated for improvements to the University of Illinois and five normal universities and teachers' colleges. The Urbana campus would receive $11,769,000 to construct residence halls, a Bettendorf laboratory and buildings for chemical engineering, fine arts, electrical engineering, veterinary studies, band and physical education.

The university's Chicago campus would receive $2,900,000 for an addition to the general hospital, atmospheric research facilities, distribution system and land acquisition.

Berlin Fell To Reds In Year 1870

The last time Russia took Berlin was 185 years ago. They took it from Frederick the Great, the French-speaking autocrat who brought the Prussian military tradition into first flower. They did it with ill-trained and poorly led troops but held it only three days.

Three years before the Russians barged in, a flying detachment of 4,000 Austrian cavalry under command of dashing Gen. Haddick razed a Berlin suburb and forced the capital, under threat of similar treatment, to pay ransom. Within 12 hours Haddick wheeled his troops and was gone before the Prussians discovered the meagre size of his forces.

Gustavus Adolphus, the Swedish soldier of the Cross, was in Berlin in 1631.

Napoleon swept in from the west in 1806 and exacted heavy levies to fill his empire war chest.

Locomotive Dashes To Rescue In Church Fire

DECATUR, Ill.—Flames threatened the Antioch Christian church out in the rural reaches. The battle seemed to turn against fire companies from three communities when three nearby wells went dry. A gathering crowd experienced the thrill of drama building to a climax, and from Decatur, four miles away, Baltimore & Ohio locomotive No. 2235 whisked to the scene with 3,000 gallons of water in its tank. The church was saved.

Alliance Manufacturing Buys Leigh Pottery Site

The Alliance Manufacturing Co., has purchased the plant on Lake Park blvd., East Alliance, in which it has been operating for five years, from the Alliance First National bank, as trustee, R. P. Doyle, general manager, announces.

The property was formerly occupied by the Leigh Pottery Co., and includes about 21 acres of land. Doyle said this would be the main plant of the company.

The bank was trustee under an agreement between Lmoges China Co., Salem China Co., Delos Walker, Ruth Sebring Gray and Charles L. Sebring as executors of the estate of F. A. Sebring. Nina Sebring Walker, Ruth Sebring Gray, Marjorie Sebring Phillips and Eva Norris.

Federal tax stamps indicate a purchase price of $37,500 was paid. The property is listed on the 1943 tax duplicate at $63,240, including installations made by the Alliance firm.

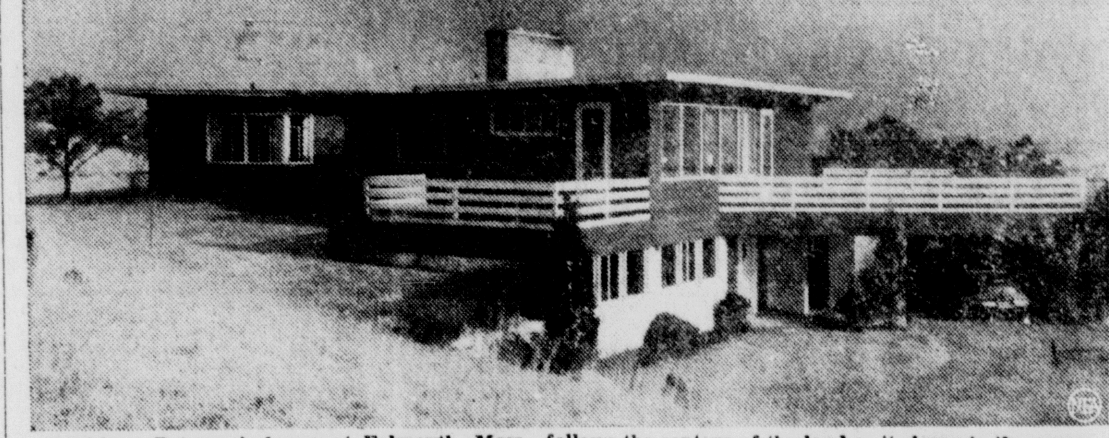

Tantalite Ore Sought By Seabees In Arctic

POINT BARROW, Ala. — Far northern Seabees, up above the magnetic north pole in northern Canada to try to find oil, are keeping a sharp eye for tantalite ore.

One source of tantalum, a superhard, noncorrosive metal, has been found by Gurtine De Stiffany, a Montana explorer and prospector. The world's supply is small and the metal is next to gold and platinum in value.

A new source of tantalum in the far north would supplement the meager supply in Brazil, Belgian Congo and Australia. North America's only known previous supply was mined on a very small scale in New Mexico and South Dakota.

ARCHITECT'S "HOUSE OF TOMORROW" GIVES UTMOST LIVING COMFORT TODAY

Architect Peterson's house at Falmouth, Mass., follows the contour of the land as it slopes to the ocean shore. Under spacious sun deck he has built an open carport, off which are reception and coat rooms.

By ROSELLEN CALLAHAN

FALMOUTH, Mass.—Combining the best features of conventional homes of yesterday and improvements planned for postwar homes, Architect Ernest Gunnar Peterson is enjoying the ease and comfort of his "house of tomorrow" today.

Beating a path to the door of Architect Peterson's modern type home here, dozens and dozens of visitors—among them architects, heating engineers and contractors—have filed through his six-room, two-story "postwar" home in search of advanced architectural ideas which already have stood the test of time.

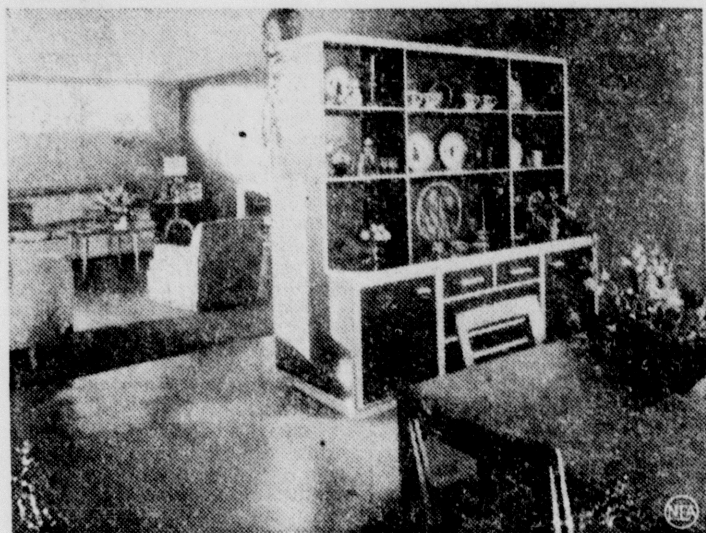

At odds with "star gazers" who, he says, profess to see in the immediate postwar period homes of a shape, size and content as to be completely unrecognizable by all previous standards, Peterson has proved a home can be modern both inside and outside without relinquishing intrinsic beauty and serviceability.

Built on a knoll overlooking Vineyard sound in the heart of conservative Cape Cod, where adherence to traditional architecture is proverbial, the streamlined red cedar clapboard house was completed just before wartime restrictions froze construction.

"No attempt was made to be revolutionary," the architect insists. "I merely incorporated the best materials and ideas that seemed to be permanently desirable."

These are modern architecture, large glass areas, radiant heating and built-in furniture. Though Peterson shies away from the revolutionary, he believes there will be a definite departure from traditional designs in postwar housing. His home, designed accordingly, has flat roof sections that serve as sun decks and porches.

Window areas in all the rooms are very large by traditional standards. For example, the windows in the living-dining room take up almost half the wall space. In one bedroom there are 320 square feet of window area and only 156 square feet of unglazed outside wall.

Temperatures in Falmouth frequently drop below zero, so this architect's theory of large window areas is not restricted to warm climates. Radiant heating—in this case 800 feet of steam heated wrought iron pipe laid on a gravel fill and covered over with a cement floor slab—keeps the floors comfortably warm. Even though temperatures outside drop to 15 degrees below zero, the thermostat is seldom set higher than 68 degrees.

Built-in furnishings, the fourth innovation that he believes will be incorporated in many postwar houses, are a contemporary convenience in the Peterson home. The "wall" separating his living room and dining room is really a dual purpose cabinet. On the living room side it serves as a bookcase. On the opposite side it is a buffet with drawers at the bottom and cupboard space above. A settee has

In the picture of Alaska as a round-the-world air route, the Alaskan priest said the idea of using the Aleutians as "stepping stones" to Japan and Russia was one of the worst misconceptions being mouthed.

"Weather in the Aleutians is so bad and unpredictable they never can be used for anything, but the route makes possible flights to Asia and Europe where planes would never be out of sight of land for more than 15 minutes," he explained.

Turning to the domestic aspects of recent Alaskan developments, Father Hubbard charged politics played a large part in the Canol oil project in Canada. "There is the navy reserve lands in Alaska covering 100,000 square miles, filled with oil which can be scooped from the surface in buckets, awaiting development. It is close to shipping, and temperatures don't get so low the oil must be heated and forced from source to outlet as does the Canol undertaking."

Land's Alcan Highway
Father Hubbard said the Alcan highway "is not all waste is so much of war-time projects. Even now civilian traffic is flowing over the highway and in the future it will become a most-important road of North America."

103 MILLION PWA PLAN FOR ILLINOIS

State To Benefit From Program On Postwar Planning

CHICAGO—Illinois will benefit from a $103,554,647 post-war public planning works program set up by the Illinois Postwar Planning commission here recently.

The program includes construction of buildings and other permanent improvements in the state university and colleges, state hospitals and penal institutions, government buildings at Springfield and the acquisition of a state office building in Chicago.

Chairman Anderson Pace said "construction would be started as soon as Gov. Dwight H. Green and the state assembly approve the program and men and materials are available. The projects are expected to help furnish employment for many men released from service or war production."

Separate Program

The commission emphasized the public works project is independent of the state highway program and other projects which will draw $200,000,000 from specially reserved funds.

Under the program an advance of $10,000,000 would be made to counties, municipalities and school districts who would match the funds to make local postwar improvements.

Veterans' hospitals and recreation facilities would receive $7,988,600; tuberculosis hospitals, $3,000,000, and the armory board, $9,155,405, to carry out its plans to set up 14 additional armories for veterans organizations.

One-fourth of the entire project is slated for improvements to the University of Illinois and five normal universities and teachers' colleges. The Urbana campus would receive $11,769,000 to construct residence halls, a Betatron laboratory and buildings for chemical engineering, fine arts, electrical engineering, veterinary studies, band and physical education.

The university's Chicago campus would receive $2,900,000 for an addition to the general hospital, atmospheric research facilities, distribution system and land acquisition.

Berlin Fell To Reds In Year 1870

The last time Russia took Berlin was 185 years ago.

They took it from Frederick the Great, the French-speaking autocrat who brought the Prussian military tradition into first flower. They did it with ill-trained and poorly led troops but held it only three days.

Three years before the Russians barged in, a flying detachment of 4,000 Austrian cavalry under command of daring Gen. Haddick razed a Berlin suburb and forced the capital, under threat of similar treatment, to pay ransom. Within 12 hours Haddick wheeled his troops and was gone before the Prussians discovered the meagre size of his forces.

Gustavus Adolphus, the Swedish savior of the Cross, was in Berlin in 1631.

Napoleon swept in from the west in 1806 and exacted heavy levies to fill his empire war chest.

Locomotive Dashes To Rescue In Church Fire

DECATUR, Ill.—Flames threatened the Antioch Christian church out in the rural reaches. The battle seemed to turn against fire companies from three communities when three nearby wells went dry. A gathering crowd experienced the thrill of drama building to a climax, and...

From Decatur, four miles away, Baltimore & Ohio locomotive No. 2235 whistled to the scene with 3,000 gallons of water in its tank. The church was saved.

Alliance Manufacturing Buys Leigh Pottery Site

The Alliance Manufacturing Co., has purchased the plant on Lake Park blvd., East Alliance, in which it has been operating for five years from the Alliance First National bank, as trustee, R. F. Doyle, general manager, announces.

The property was formerly occupied by the Leigh Pottery Co., and includes about 21 acres of land. Doyle said this would be the main plant of the company.

The bank was trustee under an agreement between Linoges China Co., Salem China Co., Debra Walker, Ruth S. Bring Gray and Charles L. Febring as executors of the estate of F. A. Sebring. Nina Sebring Walker, Ruth Sebring Gray, Marjorie Sebring Phillips and Eva Norris.

Federal tax stamps indicate a purchase price of $37,500 was paid. The property is listed on the 1943 tax duplicate at $63,240, including installations made by the Alliance firm.

Tantalite Ore Sought By Seabees In Arctic

POINT BARROW, Ala. — Far northern Seabees, up above the magnetic north pole in northern Canada to try to find oil, are keeping a sharp eye for tantalite ore. One source of tantalite, a superhard, noncorrosive metal, has been found by Guertne De Stiffany, a Montana explorer and prospector. The world's supply is small and the metal is next to gold and platinum in value.

A new source of tantalite in the far north would supplement the meager supply in Brazil, Belgian Congo and Australia. North America's only known previous supply was mined on a very small scale in New Mexico and South Dakota.

ARCHITECT'S 'HOUSE OF TOMORROW' GIVES UTMOST LIVING COMFORT TODAY

Architect Peterson's house at Falmouth, Mass., follows the contour of the land as it slopes to the ocean shore. Under spacious sun deck he has built an open carport, off which are reception and coat rooms.

By ROSELLEN CALLAHAN

FALMOUTH, Mass.—Combining the best features of conventional homes of yesterday and improvements planned for postwar homes, Architect Ernest Gunnar Peterson is enjoying the ease and comfort of his "house of tomorrow" today.

Beating a path to the door of Architect Peterson's modern type home here, dozens and dozens of visitors—among them architects, heating engineers and contractors—have filed through his six-room, two-story "postwar" home in search of advanced architectural ideas which already have stood the test of time.

At odds with "star gazers" who, he says, profess to see in the immediate postwar period homes of a shape, size and content as to be completely unrecognizable by all previous standards, Peterson has moved a home can be modern both inside and outside without relinquishing intrinsic beauty and serviceability.

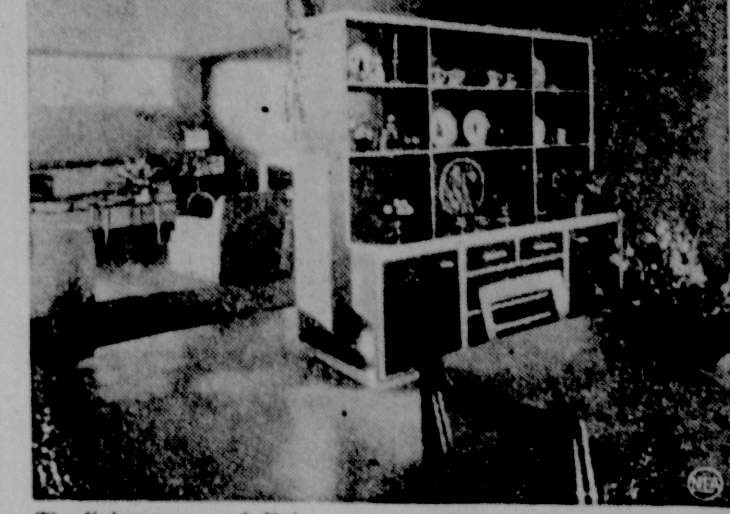

Built on a knoll overlooking Vineyard sound in the heart of conservative Cape Cod, where adherence to traditional architecture is proverbial, the streamlined red cedar clapboard house was completed just before wartime restrictions froze construction.

"No attempt was made to be revolutionary," the architect insists. "I merely incorporated the best materials and ideas that seemed to be permanently desirable."

These are modern architecture, large glass areas, radiant heating and built-in furniture.

Though Peterson shies away from the revolutionary, he believes there will be a definite departure from traditional designs in postwar housing. His home, designed accordingly, has flat roof sections that serve as sun decks and porches.

Window areas in all the rooms are very large by traditional standards. For example, the windows in the living-dining room take up almost half the wall space. In one bedroom there are 320 square feet of window area and only 156 square feet of unglazed outside wall.

Temperatures in Falmouth frequently drop below zero, so this architect's theory of large window areas is not restricted to warm climates. Radiant heating—in this case 800 feet of steam heated wrought iron pipe laid on a gravel fill and covered over with a cement floor slab—keeps the floors comfortably warm. Even though temperatures outside drop to 15 degrees below zero, the thermostat is seldom set higher than 68 degrees.

Built-in furnishings, the fourth innovation that he believes will be incorporated in many postwar houses, are a contemporary convenience in the Peterson home. The "wall" separating his living room and dining room is really a dual purpose cabinet. On the living room side it serves as a bookcase. On the opposite side it is a buffet with drawers at the bottom and cupboard space above. A settee has

State-Wide Basketball Picture Reveals Difficult Field

Lima St. John, a state class "B" finalist in 1944, was eliminated by Bluffton in a northwest district preliminary tournament for exempted villages and parochial schools.

Of the more highly-rated contenders for the 1945 class "A" championship, only Toledo Woodward is not finished with its regular schedule. The unbeaten Polar Bears will play Toledo Waite Friday night but they're heavy favorites to go into tournament play with a perfect record. Woodward drubbed Sylvania, 45 to 25, last week.

17 Victories

Middletown, the defending champion in class "A" is finished with its regular schedule with 17 straight victories and 36 triumphs in a row over two seasons. The Middies closed out with a 26 to 18 conquest of Hamilton.

Bellevue also chalked up a perfect record for the season but Canton McKinley saw its hopes for such a performance blasted in its last game of the season. The Bulldogs, playing their fourth game in eight days, took a 51 to 36 setback from Mansfield after they had won 16 in a row.

That put the Bulldogs in the same class with Canton Timken which won 17 of 18, losing only to McKinley.

The three 1944 class "B" finalists in the running are the defending champions from Akron Ellet, Worthington and Philo, but despite the fact all have had good records for the season they were overshadowed by a flock of other class "B" teams as the decks were cleared for sectional competition.

Clippers Right Among Best

For example, Columbiana and Farmer are going into the sectional unbeaten and both have recorded tremendous scoring averages. Farmer with 21 straight triumphs, has averaged 61.5 points a game. Columbiana has averaged 61.4 points a game in winning 16 straight contests.

Then, there are such teams as Norton and Ashville, both beaten a time or two but still rated as among the best in the state.

Ashville's only setback was a one-point decision to Norton last week. A threat of disaster hung over Carl Lilly, star center, will be 20 years old on March 8 and thus ineligible for further competition.

Columbiana's 87 to 43 decision over East Palestine and Massillon's 80 to 28 conquest of Warren Harding were among last week's finest offensive performances. The Massillon triumph was marked by a 32-point scoring spurge by five-foot, five-inch Eddie Crescenzo.

BIVINS - FLYNN IN CLEVELAND MATCH

Flynn Has 22-Pound Edge On Discharged Local Negro Fighter

BY LARRY SMITH

CLEVELAND, Feb. 27—Jimmy Bivins, possessor of the longest winning streak among active heavyweights, aims at his 18th consecutive victory tomorrow night when he trades punches with Johnny Flynn in a 10-rounder at the Arena.

The Cleveland Negro was the nation's top ranking civilian heavyweight before his army induction last year. Since receiving a medical discharge two months ago he has notched two straight knockouts.

Flynn should provide the answer to whether Bivins has recovered his timing and speed since his hitch in the army. The Rochester heavyweight has won nine straight fights.

Both Hopeful

"He realizes he can go places if he wins this one and he'll give all he's got," says Johnny Pepke, supervisor of Flynn's training. "Sure there's a chance that Bivins will knock him out, but I really believe that's the only way Flynn can lose. He'll have the reach and weight on Bivins."

Trainer "Whizbang" Carter contends Bivins will flatten Flynn. "Right now Jimmy is in as good physical condition as he ever was," Carter declares.

Bivins will enter the ring at around 188 pounds, conceding approximately 22 pounds to Flynn.

Salem A. C. Is Arranging Special Films, Talks For Diamond Fans

At their first meeting of the 1945 season, the Salem Athletic club baseball organization began plans for the opening of its second year on the diamond.

The meeting, held at the Memorial building Sunday afternoon, was called by Sponsor Scott Chisholm to formulate plans for the club's first opening of 1945.

A special program is being arranged for baseball fans of Salem, Lisbon, Columbiana, Alliance and other surrounding communities. Chisholm announced that films entitled, "World Series of 1944," will be shown at the building on March 13, when the club will entertain.

A pair of well known baseball figures are being lined up for the meeting and some local men will speak.

Other plans discussed at the meeting included the purchase of new equipment for players and umpires, further improvements of the Centennial park diamond and arrangement of the summer's schedule. Several new players will be with the squad this year.

The Athletic club's basketball team will meet Leed's of Warren in a special match at the building at 8:30 p. m. Friday.

Flynn should provide the answer to whether Bivins has recovered his timing and speed since his hitch in the army. The Rochester heavyweight has won nine straight fights.

Both Hopeful
"He realizes he can go places if he wins this one and he'll give all he's got," says Johnny Papke, supervisor of Flynn's training. "Sure there's a chance that Bivins will knock him out, but I really believe that's the only way Flynn can lose. He'll have the reach and weight on Bivins."

Trainer "Whizbang" Carter contends Bivins will flatten Flynn. "Right now Jimmy is in as good physical condition as he ever was," Carter declares.

Bivins will enter the ring at around 180 pounds, conceding approximately 22 pounds to Flynn.

For The Fans!

Salem A. C. Is Arranging Special Films, Talks For Diamond Fans

At their first meeting of the 1945 season, the Salem Athletic club baseball organization began plans for the opening of its second year on the diamond. The meeting, held at the Memorial building Sunday afternoon, was called by Sponsor Scott Chisholm to formulate plans for the club's first opening of 1945.

A special program is being arranged for baseball fans of Salem, Lisbon, Columbiana, Alliance and other surrounding communities. Chisholm announced that films entitled, "World Series of 1944," will be shown at the building on March 13, when the club will entertain.

A pair of well known baseball figures are being lined up for the meeting and some local men will speak. Other plans discussed at the meeting included the purchase of new equipment for players and umpires, further improvements of the Centennial park diamond and arrangement of the summer's schedule. Several new players will be with the squad this year.

The Athletic club's basketball team will meet Leed's of Warren in a special match at the building at 8:30 p.m. Friday.

Treasury Agent Is New Liquor Enforcement Aide

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Feb. 27.—The State Liquor department today "borrowed" an agent from the criminal investigation branch of the U. S. Treasury department in the first step of strengthening its enforcement division.

Gov. Frank J. Lausche announced that Maynard J. Kimball of Willoughby, O. had been appointed enforcement agent for the liquor district embracing Cuyahoga (Cleveland, Lake, Ashtabula and Lorain counties).

Kimball, taking a leave of absence from the Treasury department, will assume his new duties March 1 at a salary of $6,000 a year.

He spent 18 years in the income tax division of the Treasury department and five years in the division whose duty is ferreting out evaders of the federal alcohol tax.

"This is the type of man I'd like to get in every one of the six liquor enforcement districts," Gov. Lausche said at a press conference.

CHURCHILL BACKS NEW POLISH LINE

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, Feb. 27.—Prime Minister Churchill asserted today the proposed new Polish frontier "will not sow the seeds of future wars," and said Marshal Stalin had given "the most solemn declarations" that Poland's sovereignty and independence would be maintained.

"This decision has now been joined in both by Great Britain and by the United States," he declared in comments in the first public account by one of the Big Three principals on the historic decisions at Yalta.

In shaping the new peace, "we intend to take steps far more drastic and effective than those which followed the last war so as to render offensive action by Germany utterly impossible for a generation to come," the British leader said.

Churchill demanded a vote of confidence in the Yalta plans for a peaceful world, especially challenging those who have centered their criticisms upon the Polish decisions.

"If we were confronted tomorrow with a collapse of the German forces, there is nothing that has not been foreseen and arranged beforehand by the European advisory commission," he said.

Boost Reward To $1,000 In E. Liverpool Slaying

EAST LIVERPOOL, Feb. 27.—Police today boosted from $500 to $1,000 a reward offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the suspected "hired killer" of Stephen Phillips, 45, restaurant owner and one-time British army messenger, who died Feb. 18, two days after he was slugged with an iron bar in front of his home.

The offer, expiring July 1, was upped by Police Chief Hugh McDermott when the initial $500 reward failed to prompt any response.

Investigators said Phillips' safety deposit box, which was forced open today because his key could not be found, may reveal a clue to the mystery.

Ends Life, Leaves Body For Medical Research

COLUMBUS, Feb. 27.—John Wilson Weems, 43-year-old book store salesman, was found dead at the entrance to Ohio State university's medical college early today, and a note in his pocket directed that his body be used for medical research by the college, Coroner John B. Gravis reported.

Gravis said Weems apparently took his own life with 32 caliber revolver found beside the body.

YANKS TAKE JAPS TO OWN LINES

COVERED BY YANK SOLDIERS' rifles, 65 Japanese officers and men march through American lines to safety from the Santo Tomas internment camp in Manila. The Japs held 200 Americans as hostages in the camp, and made a deal for a safe conduct in exchange for these American lives. The negotiations were carried out by Ernest Stanley, a missionary, who is shown in white shirt at right. (International Soundphoto)

Killing May Result In Ohio 'Slots' Probe

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, Feb. 27.—The body of Nathan Weisenberg, 60-year-old gangland-style slaying victim labeled by police as Cleveland's slot machine king, lay in an East Side funeral home awaiting burial today as authorities urged a statewide investigation of "slots" operations.

Private services for Weisenberg, who was found Saturday in his automobile, his head shattered by a shotgun charge, were to be held at the funeral home.

Safety Director Frank D. Celebrezze said he would send a report of the slaying investigation to Gov. Frank Lausche in Columbus "when all the facts are in."

Informed of the theory held by local police that Weisenberg was killed by rival slot machine operators, Gov. Lausche said:

"I would welcome a report on the investigation. If it can be shown that this killing was connected with slot machine rackets in a wide area of the state, I would consider it my duty to step into such a dangerous situation."

Lt. Martin Cooney, head of the homicide squad, urged a statewide crackdown on "slots," asserting "if all counties could clean them out we might stop a racket war for the slot business."

A 27-year-old ex-convict, questioned following receipt of a tip that he attempted to move slot machines into Barborton, denied knowledge of the slaying.

Celebrezze awaited a police report on police failure to investigate an attempted burglary of Weisenberg's office 24 hours before the slaying.

could have been anticipated—not only in the center but in the north, where the Canadian First army is driving against the German right flank, and in the south where Patton's hell-raising Third is turning the German left.

It's to be hoped Rundstedt will stand and give battle, for General Ike wants to settle accounts west of the Rhine. That would render the Ruhr and the approaches to Berlin highly vulnerable, for the marshal's forces are the guardians of the western Reich and Hitler hasn't the manpower with which to replace them.

Still, even if Rundstedt should escape across the Rhine we shall have achieved a notable gain. We also shall have the early satisfaction of seeing our heavy artillery lofting shells across the river into the great manufacturing centers of the Ruhr—the last big production center left to the Reich.

Defeat of Rundstedt west of the Rhine would vastly simplify the crossing of that great river by the Allies. With the marshal defending it from the east side, Eisenhower would be faced with another of the war's toughest jobs. However, he is equal to the task, for he has the striking power. I remind you again that the Allied commander has a big air-borne army at his disposal. One of these days we are likely to see fighting-men in large numbers descending on the Germans from the skies.

We shouldn't take the present moderate resistance as necessarily indicative of what is to come. It will be remarkable if Rundstedt doesn't give us some tough days yet.

Overshooting on the landing, our pilot was forced to apply his brakes with the plane travelling at about 70 miles per hour, sending the plane over on its nose. Both the bombardier and I were crushed back against the rudder pedals until the plane righted itself. Everyone came through alright, although four of us did receive Purple Hearts for wounds received from the flak."

Lieut. Hansell joined the Air Corps May 15, 1943, and received his cadet's appointment on Nov. 1, 1943. He was awarded his navigator's wings at Ellington field, Texas, March 20, 1944, and left for overseas combat duty in August, 1944.

He flew his 50th mission on Jan. 8, to Linz, Austria, and has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, Purple Heart, and the Air Medal with two bronze Oak Leaf Clusters.

He graduated from Salem High School in 1941, and later attended Miami university, at Oxford, O.

Send Something of Yourself to HIM!

Keep the RED CROSS by His Side

In a Leyte evacuation hospital a gracious woman, sent by you and your Red Cross, pauses beside a boy swathed in gauze. She smiles, exchanges friendly banter, leaves cigarettes and a book. He rallies and lives. In a rear-area, a golden melody pours forth from a truck-borne piano into the heart of a boy, dull-eyed at the sight of death. He smiles and lives. Life-sustaining plasma, from you and yours, pours into the crumpled body of a boy thousands of miles from home. He revives and lives.

Each a priceless link with our way of life, with you and yours, forged by you through your American Red Cross. Millions of these links are on the record during more than three years of war. They are the things you'd do so gladly for him if you were at his side. Your boy received a Red Cross comfort kit when he embarked. He finds recreation in any of 727 Red Cross clubs and lounges in as many battle areas. 194 rolling Red Cross clubmobiles serve him in many battle zones. Many of our men have been restored to health in Red Cross rest centers. The Red Cross goes all the way, following even those who have been trapped by the enemy. Each receives weekly Red Cross food packages and the folks at home get news of his whereabouts.

Treasury Agent Is New Liquor Enforcement Aide

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Feb. 27.—The State Liquor department today "borrowed" an agent from the criminal investigation branch of the U. S. Treasury department in the first step of strengthening its enforcement division.

Gov. Frank J. Lausche announced that Maynard J. Kimball of Willoughby, O., had been appointed enforcement agent for the liquor district embracing Cuyahoga (Cleveland, Lake, Ashtabula and Lorain counties).

Kimball, taking a leave of absence from the Treasury department, will assume his new duties March 1 at a salary of $3,600 a year.

He spent 18 years in the income tax division of the Treasury department and five years in the division whose duty is ferreting out evaders of the federal alcohol tax.

"This is the type of man I'd like to get in every one of the six liquor enforcement districts," Gov. Lausche said at a press conference.

CHURCHILL BACKS NEW POLISH LINE

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, Feb. 27.—Prime Minister Churchill asserted today the proposed new Polish frontier "will not sow the seeds of future wars," and said Marshal Stalin had given "the most solemn declarations" that Poland's sovereignty and independence would be maintained.

"This decision has now been joined in both by Great Britain and by the United States," he declared in commons in the first public account by one of the Big Three principals on the historic decisions at Yalta.

In shaping the new peace, "we intend to take steps far more drastic and effective than those which followed the last war so as to render offensive action by Germany utterly impossible for a generation to come," the British leader said.

Churchill demanded a vote of confidence in the Yalta plans for a peaceful world, especially challenging those who have centered their criticisms upon the Polish decisions.

"If we were confronted tomorrow with a collapse of the German forces, there is nothing that has not been foreseen and arranged beforehand by the European advisory commission," he said.

Boost Reward To $1,000 In E. Liverpool Slaying

EAST LIVERPOOL, Feb. 27.—Police today boosted from $500 to $1,000 a reward offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the suspected "hired killer" of Stephen Phillips, 45, restaurant owner and one-time British army messenger, who died Feb. 18, two days after he was slugged with an iron bar in front of his home.

The offer, expiring July 1, was upped by Police Chief Hugh McDermott when the initial $500 reward failed to prompt any response.

Investigators said Phillips' safety deposit box, which was forced open today because his key could not be found, may reveal a clue to the mystery.

Ends Life, Leaves Body For Medical Research

COLUMBUS, Feb. 27.—John Wilson Weems, 43-year-old book store salesman, was found dead at the entrance to Ohio State university's medical college early today, and a note in his pocket directed that his body be used for medical research by the college. Coroner John B. Gravis reported.

Weems said Weems apparently took his own life with .32 caliber revolver found beside the body.

YANKS TAKE JAPS TO OWN LINES

COVERED BY YANK SOLDIERS' rifles, 65 Japanese officers and men march through American lines to safety from the Santo Tomas internment camp in Manila. The Japs held 200 Americans as hostages in the camp, and made a deal for a safe conduct in exchange for these American lives. The negotiations were carried out by Ernest Stanley, a missionary, who is shown in white shirt at right. (International Soundphoto)

Killing May Result In Ohio 'Slots' Probe

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, Feb. 27.—The body of Nathan Weisenberg, 60-year-old gangland-style slaying victim labeled by police as Cleveland's slot machine king, lay in an East Side funeral home awaiting burial today as authorities urged a statewide investigation of "slots" operations.

Private services for Weisenberg, who was found Saturday in his automobile, his head shattered by a shotgun charge, were to be held at the funeral home.

Safety Director Frank D. Celebrezze said he would send a report of the slaying investigation to Gov. Frank Lausche in Columbus "when all the facts are in."

Informed of the theory held by local police that Weisenberg was killed by rival slot machine operators, Gov. Lausche said:

"I would welcome a report on the investigation. If it can be shown that this killing was connected with slot machine rackets in a wide area of the state, I would consider it my duty to step into such a dangerous situation."

Lt. Martin Cooney, head of the homicide squad, urged a statewide crackdown on "slots," asserting "if all counties could clean them out we might stop a racket war for the slot business."

A 27-year-old ex-convict, questioned following receipt of a tip that he attempted to move slot machines into a Barborton, denied knowledge of the slaying.

Celebrezze awaited a police report on police failure to investigate an attempted burglary of Weisenberg's office 24 hours before the slaying.
